

Protected Status: Violation of the Provisions of Protected Status under International Humanitarian Law during the Liberation War of Bangladesh

Authors : Sabera Sultana

Abstract : In today's war-torn world, it is crucial to identify, understand, and apply the laws aimed at minimizing civilian casualty during wartime. The purpose of this paper is to analyze the provisions of protected status under international humanitarian law and evaluate the historical facts and shreds of evidences of violation of protected status during the Liberation War of Bangladesh. This legal research paper evaluates the international humanitarian laws and case laws regarding protected status of people during wartime and evaluates them against the historical facts and well-documented evidences of violation of protected status during the Liberation War of Bangladesh. This paper will help to create a brief guideline on Protected Status under international humanitarian law, which will help to protect our civilians during wartime if ever required.

Keywords : civilian protection, international humanitarian laws, liberation war of Bangladesh, protected status

Conference Title : ICELPAP 2020 : International Conference on Economic, Legal, Political, and Public Administration Perspectives

Conference Location : Copenhagen, Denmark

Conference Dates : July 15-16, 2020