

Review of the World Migration Report 2020, with a Focus on Migration Due to Climate Change

Authors : Sincy Wilson

Abstract : This article focuses on the data scattered throughout the 2020 Report on migration for a variety of reasons. Despite the fact that climate migrants are no longer recognized on an international or national level, their situation remains unchanged, and many countries have already encountered the problem of people entering their country without permission. With the information presented in the paper, researchers are focusing on climate-induced displacement rather than conflict-related migration. The author finishes by stating that there is no time to waste in recognizing climate migrants.

Keywords : climate refugees, climatological factors, migration, slow-onset migration

Conference Title : ICLCH 2021 : International Conference on Law, Culture and the Humanities

Conference Location : Paris, France

Conference Dates : December 30-31, 2021