

The Effect of Coronavirus on Social Adjustment and Depression of Arak University Students

Authors : Mansour Abdi

Abstract : The aim of this study has been the investigation of coronavirus influence/impact on social adjustment and depression of Arak University students. The samples of study are 100 available female students at Arak University. They were assessed by the Bell Social Adjustment Questionnaire and Beck Depression. They were asked to answer two situations before the corona outbreak and the present. The result of evaluating/assessing the difference between social adjustment before and after coronavirus was not significant but, the averages indicate a decrease in the adjustment of students before and after the coronavirus. Meanwhile, there was no significant difference in depression findings but, in the present, the average amount of depression indicated an increase than its amount before the corona.

Keywords : depression, social adjustment student, coronavirus, student

Conference Title : ICPA 2022 : International Conference on Psychology of Action

Conference Location : London, United Kingdom

Conference Dates : July 28-29, 2022