

The Psychological and Behavioral Problems of Children of the First Years and Their Interest in School Education

Authors : Amina Salem Attia

Abstract : This research project consists in studying The child's mental health is the medium through which he expresses his thoughts, so pay attention to it because it is an essential building block in the process of building the child's future personality, where it gives him a balance between feelings and mental thoughts, and since the family is the child's first guardian, it greatly affects his personality and psychological development. As the disturbed environment contributes to behavioral deviations and mental disorders, unlike the stable environment, which plays a major role in developing the child's abilities and forming his psychologically sound attitudes, this should not be forgotten about the role of the school, it is also the second social institution after the family and has a major impact on the child's mental health as it contributes It is important in forming the child's personality and developing his skills and achieving his healthy psychological development, by providing him with psychological care and helping him to solve his problems by using models that are valid for the behavior that is taught to him or that the teachers present in their daily behavior with him.

Keywords : psychological, behavioral problems, children, school education

Conference Title : ICALLLT 2023 : International Conference on Applied Linguistics, Language Learning and Teaching

Conference Location : Montreal, Canada

Conference Dates : May 15-16, 2023