

ISIS and Its Impact on Geographical Change in Iraq's Population

Authors : Pshtiwan Shafiq Ahmed

Abstract : The invasion of Iraq was a turning point in Iraq, destroying the economic infrastructure of several important strategic and historic cities, including Mosul, Anbar and Diyala, which will take decades to rebuild. It left 18,805 people dead and 37,000 injured, destroying hundreds of villages and cities, displacing 2.3 million people, and increasing the number of orphans. The increase in the number of widows and the destruction of society and the structure of the population so that the number of children, women and the elderly has increased. Religious clashes have increased and religious cleansing has begun, trying to eradicate Christianity, Yazidis and Kakais from the whole of Iraq, causing the largest number of Christians, Yazidis and Kakais to leave Iraq and many of them went missing.

Keywords : ISIS, population change, geographical change, Iraq

Conference Title : ICA 2022 : International Conference on Anthropology

Conference Location : Venice, Italy

Conference Dates : November 10-11, 2022