

Muslim Women Converts through the ideological Eyes of Algerian Newspapers Discourse

Authors : Zerrifi Meryem

Abstract : Discourse on Muslim women has been criticized in scientific research as being racist, sexist, and ideological. Convert women who come from various backgrounds are cases that form a rich area of investigation that have been covered from a narrative perspective in which experiences of convert women are represented through stories telling journey to conversion to Islam. They have not been problematized in relation to the Algerian media discourse; yet, their omnipresence cannot be denied as a Muslim community. This research aims at demonstrating ideologies that are perpetuated along newspapers' discourse. The present study investigates the discursive portrayal of female Muslim converts in this type of discourse.
