

The Difference between Legislative Jurisdiction and Judicial Jurisdiction in International Law

Authors : Zhang Rui

Abstract : The primary aim of the study is to compare legislative jurisdiction and judicial jurisdiction in international law, highlighting the unique conditions and bases for their exercise in legal practice. The research employs a comparative law analysis approach alongside a thorough examination of international law principles to achieve a comprehensive understanding of legislative and judicial jurisdiction in the international legal context. The findings of this research underscore the diverse development trajectory of legislative jurisdiction in international law, emphasizing the continued significance of territoriality as a primary basis for exercising judicial jurisdiction.

Keywords : international law, judicial jurisdiction, legislative jurisdiction, legal implementation

Conference Title : ICILP 2025 : International Conference on International Law and Policy

Conference Location : Sydney, Australia

Conference Dates : March 24-25, 2025