

The Pursuit of Marital Sustainability Inspiring by Successful Matrimony of Two Distinguishable Indonesian Ethnics as a Learning Process

Authors : Mutiara Amalina Khairisa, Purnama Arafah, Rahayu Listiana Ramli

Abstract : In recent years, so many cases of divorce increasingly occur. Betrayal in form of infidelity, less communication one another, economically problems, selfishness of two sides, intervening parents from both sides which frequently occurs in Asia, especially in Indonesia, the differences of both principles and beliefs, "Sense of Romantism" depletion, role conflict, a large difference in the purpose of marriage, and sex satisfaction are expected as the primary factors of the causes of divorce. Every couple of marriage wants to reach happy life in their family but severe problems brought about by either of those main factors come as a reasonable cause of failure marriage. The purpose of this study is to find out how marital adjustment and supporting factors in ensuring the success of that previous marital adjustment are inseparable two things assumed as a framework can affect the success in marriage becoming a resolution to reduce the desires to divorce. Those two inseparable things are able to become an aspect of learning from the success of the different ethnics marriage to keep holding on wholeness.

Keywords : marital adjustment, marital sustainability, learning process, successful ethnicity differences marriage, basical cultural values

Conference Title : ICPPS 2015 : International Conference on Psychology and Psychological Sciences

Conference Location : Paris, France

Conference Dates : May 18-19, 2015