University of Bejaia, Algeria

Authors : Geoffrey Sinha

Abstract : Today's students are connected to the digital generation and technology is an integral part of their everyday lives. Clearly, this is one social revolution that is here to stay and the language classroom has been no exception. Furthermore, today's teachers are also expected to connect with technology and online tools in their curriculum. However, it's often difficult for teachers to know where to start, what resources and tools are available, what students should use, and most importantly, how to effectively use them in the classroom.