

Personality of Military Professionals (Commanders) and Their Way of Leading and Commanding Today and in Historical Context

Authors : Petra Hurbišová, Monika Davidová

Abstract : The article deals with the personality of military professionals (commanders) and their way of leading and commanding today and in historical context. The first part focuses on the leadership skills of Alexander the Great, who introduced strategic innovations and even from today's perspective he excelled in efficient work with people. This paper focuses on the way which he achieved his goals. Further attention is paid to approaches to commander's personality by other great generals. The paper is also focused on personality traits of military professionals necessary for successful management and leadership in today's variable and challenging environment. Finally, attention is paid to the effective and ineffective ways of behavior of commanders and determined what styles of leadership is appropriate for a given situation, whether in peacetime or when commander is deployed in overseas operations or the state of war.

Keywords : authority, commander, leader, leadership, military professional, personality

Conference Title : ICHRM 2015 : International Conference on Economics and Human Resource Management

Conference Location : Rome, Italy

Conference Dates : December 03-04, 2015