

The Quality of Human Capital as a Factor of Social and Economic Development of the Region

Authors : O. Gubnitsyna, O. Zakoretskaya, O. Russova

Abstract : It is generally recognized that the main task of modern society is human development. The quality of human capital has been identified as a key driver of economic development in the region. In this article, considered the quality of human capital as one of the main types of social and economic potential for the region's development. The phenomenon of human capital represents both material and intellectual components of human activity. It is show that the necessary population characterized by certain quantitative and qualitative indicators (qualification and professional structure, education or social general condition and others) and is an necessary resource for the development of the regional economy. The connection of the regional goals with the quality of human capital is discussed in the article and a number of recommendations on its improvement were given. Solving the tasks stated in the article, the authors used analytical and statistical methods of research, scientific publications of domestic and foreign scientists on this issue. The results can be used in this implementation of the concept of regional development.

Keywords : human capital, the quality of human capital, economic development, social general condition

Conference Title : ICHLSS 2016 : International Conference on Humanities, Languages and Social Sciences

Conference Location : Lisbon, Portugal

Conference Dates : April 14-15, 2016