

The Political and Academic Consideration of Unregulated Concept of Rome Statute in Law No. 26 Year 2000 about Indonesia's Human Right Court

Authors : Muhammad Iqbal Rachman, Mohammad Faisol Soleh

Abstract : The Law No. 26 Year 2000 about Indonesia's Human Right Court became a new legal enforcement frame of human right law in Indonesia. The new spirit based on some international propulsion in order to enforce human right which basic right of everyone that appearance since in fetus. This matters indicated how crucial the arrangement of human right law, considering the role of state on human right enforcement in this context which became main pillar or instrument to accommodate citizen interest. Basically, the adopting of Law No. 26 Year 2000 came from the womb of concept international crimes regulation based on Rome Statute which became the international law instrument in order to legal enforce of international crimes. But in the other side, the enactment Rome Statute concept in Indonesia has facing with political and academics interest which resulted unaccommodating every type of international crimes in Law No. 26 Year 2000. The analyzing of political and academics background became the fundamental point to find out the solutions based on the regulation of Rome Statute concept matters in Indonesia.

Keywords : academic consideration, human right, political consideration, rome statute, unregulated concept

Conference Title : ICHREL 2017 : International Conference on Human Rights and Evolution of Law

Conference Location : Jeddah, Saudi Arabia

Conference Dates : January 30-31, 2017