

Malay ESL (English as a Second Language) Students' Difficulties in Using English Prepositions

Authors : Chek Kim Loi

Abstract : The study attempts to undertake an error analysis of prepositions employed in the written work of Form 4 Malay ESL (English as a Second Language) students in Malaysia. The error analysis is undertaken using Richards's (1974) framework of intralingual and interlingual errors and Bennett's (1975) framework in identifying prepositional concepts found in the sample. The study first identifies common prepositional errors in the written texts of 150 student participants. It then measures the relative intensities of these errors and finds out the possible causes for the occurrences of these errors. In this study, one significant finding is that among the nine concepts of prepositions examined, the participant students tended to make errors in the use of prepositions of time and place. The present study has pedagogical implications in teaching English prepositions to Malay ESL students.

Keywords : error, interlingual, intralingual, preposition

Conference Title : ICETE 2017 : International Conference on Education, Teaching and E-learning

Conference Location : Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Conference Dates : February 12-13, 2017