

The Implications of Some Social Variables in Increasing the Unemployed in Egypt

Authors : Mohamed Elkhoul

Abstract : This research sets out to identify some social factors or variables that may need to be controlled in order to decrease the volume of unemployed in Egypt. As well as, it comes to investigate the relationship between a set of social variables and unemployment issue in Egypt in the sake of determining the most important social variables influencing the rise of unemployed during the time series targeted (2002-2012). Highlighting the unemployment issue is becoming an increasingly important topic in all countries throughout the world resulting from expand their globalization efforts. In general, the study tries to determine what the most social priorities are likely to adopt seriously by the Egypt's government in order to solve the unemployed problem. The results showed that the low value for both of small projects and the total value of disbursed social security respectively have significant impact on increasing the No. of unemployed in Egypt, according to the target period by the current study.

Keywords : Egypt, social status, unemployment, unemployed

Conference Title : ICEPCS 2017 : International Conference on Economics, Politics and Civil Society

Conference Location : Zurich, Switzerland

Conference Dates : April 20-21, 2017