

A Compared Approach between Moderate Islamic Values and Basic Human Values

Authors : Adel Bessadok

Abstract : The theory of values postulates that each human has a set of values, or attractive and trans-situational goals, that drive their actions. The Basic Human Values as an incentive construct that apprehends human's values have been shown to govern a wide range of human behaviors. Individuals within and within societies have very different value preferences that reflect their enculturation, their personal experiences, their social places and their genetic heritage. Using a focus group composed by Islamic religious Preachers and a sample of 800 young students; this ongoing study will establish Moderate Islamic Values parameters. We analyze later, for the same students sample the difference between Moderate Islamic Values and Schwartz's Basic Human Values. Keywords—Moderate Islamic Values, Basic Human Values, Exploratory Factor Analysis and Confirmatory Factor Analysis.

Keywords : moderate Islamic values, basic human values, exploratory factor analysis, confirmatory factor analysis

Conference Title : ICSIMS 2017 : International Conference on Sociology, Islam, Modernization and Secularism

Conference Location : Montreal, Canada

Conference Dates : May 11-12, 2017