

Humanity in Public Policy: The Polemic of Death Penalty Policy in Indonesia

Authors : Alvian R. E. Purnomo, K. Noni Srijati, Hernawan Adi

Abstract : Government regulation is a result of agreement on the struggle of ideas, interests, and ideologies among elites in state institution. The polemic about death penalty policy in Indonesia is still becoming an interesting discussion and also a complex issue. There are pros/ cons of whether the policy is humane or not. Indonesia becomes the concern of the world's community because the policy of death penalty applied is considered not reflecting the values of Indonesian culture including tolerance, mutual cooperation, and love. This paper examines them using literature study on how public policy theories respond to humanity issues and how Indonesian government should take steps to the issue of the death penalty that has become polemic until now.

Keywords : government regulation, public policy, death penalty policy, humanity

Conference Title : ICSS 2017 : International Conference on Social Sciences

Conference Location : Stockholm, Sweden

Conference Dates : July 13-14, 2017