

The Research of Effectiveness of Animal Protection Act Implementation Reducing Animal Abuse

Authors : Yu Ling Chang

Abstract : Since the United Nations announced Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948, people are paying more and more attention to the value of lives. On the other hand, life education is being vigorously pushed in different countries. Unfortunately, the results have been only moderately successful by reason that the concept is not implemented in everyone's daily life. Even worse, animal abuse and killing events keep happening. This research is focused on generalizing a conclusion from different countries' Animal Protection Act and actual execution by case studies, in order to make an approach of whether the number of animal abuse is directly influenced by different laws and regimes or not. It concludes the central notion and spirit of Animal Protection Act in German, Japan, and Taiwan. Providing the reference of specific schemes and analysis based on Taiwanese social culture.
