

International Student Mobility to China: A Fastest and Emerging Market for International Students among Developing Countries

Authors : Yasir Khan, Qiu Bin, Antonio-Mihi Ramirez

Abstract : This study determines the inflow of international students to China in recent years and the corresponding internationalization strategies in the higher education sector. China has placed attracting international students on in its plan along with the growing of global impact. Acknowledging the stable economy, growth rate, trade, lower renminbi rate, high wages, employment opportunities, high level income per capita, relative low taxes and political system consolidate to attract more international students. A large number of international students making a vast contribution to the higher education sector of China. Understanding the significance of education mission as well as of financial 'bottom line' the Chinese government gave great importance to invite more international students from worldwide. The large number of international students in the China has been particularly notable from Asian countries specifically neighboring countries, Pakistan, Thailand, India, Vietnam, South Korea, Magnolia, Malaysia, and Russia. This study summarizes internationalization of higher education in China and also provides directions for future research in this regard.

Keywords : international student mobility, 2020 Govt Planning, emerging market, internationalization of higher education

Conference Title : ICELMF 2017 : International Conference on Economics and Labor Market Flexibility

Conference Location : Barcelona, Spain

Conference Dates : October 30-31, 2017