

Survey of American Women to Promote Social Citizenship among White, African American, and Muslim American Women

Authors : Rachel Turney

Abstract : American Woman is a discussion of being a woman in American through the lens of intersectionality, critical race theory, Muslim American identities, and social citizenship. The survey design and resulting paper are based on the researcher's personal experience studying intersectionality and Muslim American identities through National Endowment for the Humanities. The researcher poses three questions to White, African American, and Muslim American women about female identify in America. Results are coded and analyzed in their meaning in the context of American society. Results show the similarities, primarily the idea of motherhood and fighting in society. Results also examine differences like those related to faith and family identifies in responses. The researcher examines the specific overlap in responses in the context of social citizenship.

Keywords : women, Muslim women, intersectionality, feminism

Conference Title : ICGFAT 2018 : International Conference on Gender, Feminism, Art and Technology

Conference Location : London, United Kingdom

Conference Dates : April 24-25, 2018